HONGRONA, JUNE 27TH, 1888. THE information relative to the political situation contained in the Shanghai papers received is so conflicting, as to be practically ussless. All sorts of reports appear to be afficiat, and it is possible that some of these are spread by the Chinese Authorities in order to mystify the public. It mattered little to them that the price paid was heavy; they, rightly enough, piqued themselves on the moral victory they achieved. If the dispute over Tonquin is not amicably settled, it will mainly be traceable to the misplaced confidence begetten by the mandarine in themselves growing out of the expitulation of Russia on the Kuldja Question.
